(Changes in Accounting policies)

(Changes in accounting method for sales)

FYE 2019 (April 1, 2018 to June 30, 2018)

The Group previously recorded sales incentives as selling, general and administrative expenses. From the first quarter of FYE 2019, the group has changed the method to deduct from sales.

In the business environment surrounding the Group, as sales incentives tend to increase constantly, we reexamined the actual circumstances of the transactions. Sales incentives are taken into consideration when the terms of the transactions are decided and are considered as a part of selling price practically. In addition, the Group has improved business management system such as business process and system structure. It is so judged that the method of deducting sales incentives from sales is more appropriate under the circumstances.

The Group applied the changes in the accounting policy retrospectively, and reclassified in the consolidated financial statements of the previous fiscal year to reflect the changes. As a result, net sales and selling, general and administrative expenses in the consolidated statement of income for the first quarter of the previous fiscal year decreased by 40,760 million yen, respectively, compared to the amounts before the retroactive application. There is no effect on operating income, ordinary income and income before income taxes by the changes.

(Changes in accounting policies that are difficult to distinguish from changes in accounting estimates) (Changes in depreciation method for tangible fixed assets)

FYE 2019 (April 1, 2018 to June 30, 2018)

The Company and its major domestic consolidated subsidiaries changed depreciation method of certain tangible fixed assets from the declining-balance method to the straight-line method from the first quarter of FYE 2019.

In recent years, with the expansion of the product lineup, shorter intervals of full model changes and acceleration of new products to the market, there is a tendency of less fluctuation in the number of units sold after the launch. In addition, it is expected that sharing production facilities among different models makes utilization stable over the useful life in the future. It is so judged that the equalized allocation of depreciation expenses of the tangible fixed assets over the useful life reflects the actual usage of tangible fixed assets.

The effect of these changes on profit and loss for the first quarter of FYE 2019 is immaterial.

(Application of Specific Accounting for Preparing the Quarterly Consolidated Financial Statements)

FYE 2019 (April 1, 2018 to June 30, 2018)

Income tax expense was calculated as multiplying income before income taxes by reasonably estimated annual effective tax rate. This annual tax rate was reasonably estimated after applying the deferred tax accounting to the annual income before income taxes. "Income taxes-deferred" was included in "Total income taxes".

(Additional Information)

FYE 2019 (April 1, 2018 to June 30, 2018)

"Guidance on Accounting Standard for Tax Effect Accounting" (ASBJ Guidance No. 28, revised on February 16, 2018) has been applied from the first quarter of FYE 2019. Deferred tax assets are presented in the "Investment and other assets", and Deferred tax liabilities are presented in the "Non-current liabilities" on the consolidated balance sheets.

2. Changes in Segment reported

(Changes in accounting method for sales)

As described in "(Changes in Accounting policies)", changes in accounting method for sales are retrospectively applied. As a result, sales of "automobiles" decreased by 40,760 million yen in the first quarter of FYE 2018.

(Changes in depreciation method for tangible fixed assets)

As described in "(Changes in Accounting policies)", the Company and its major consolidated subsidiaries changed the depreciation method for tangible fixed assets. The effect of the change on the segment income is immaterial.
